HAMM GUILTY ON ASSAULT CHARGE

But Acquitted on Charge of Intent to Kill. Pittenturf Case Tried. Pleads Guilty to Several Charges.

Bert Hamm, of McSherrytown, was found guilty in Adams County Court this morning of assault and battery, and acquitted on a charge of assault with intent to kill. The cases grew out of the shooting affair on the pike between McSherrytown and Littlestown one night in November.

Hamm and Sponseller had both been in Hanover and agreed to drive a race to Littlestown. They started out, Sponseller leading Hamm at Mount Pleasant, about two miles from Hanover, and turning into a lane. Hamm drove by and at the top of the next hill, seeing nothing of Sponseller, turned around and drove back past the lane. A short distance beyond, Sponseller who had also turned toward Hanover drove by and Hamm shot, the bullet entering Sponseller's back passing out at the shoulder and grazing his chin. He kept on to Hanover where he later became very seriously ill but recovered finally from his wounds Hamm was arrested the day following the shooting.

Hamm was defended by Charles S. Duncan and William McSherry. District Attorney Wible conducted the case for the Commonwealth. The following composed the jury, William J. Fohl, William Singley, Daniel W. Stoops, John A. Trostle, Conrad Walter, George Oyley, Edward Hall, Charles L. Martin, John D. Brown, John M. Wetzel, William M. Arthur, J. C. Walter. The defendant was found guilty of assault and battery, and of aggravated assault and battery but was acquitted of the charge of assault with intent to kill.

James ("Duster") Pittenturf pleaded guilty to charges of escape from jail, aggravated assault and breaking and entering a warehouse. He was found guilty on a charge of second conviction for the same offense. Brannen was found guilty of aggravated assault and breaking and entering a warehouse and he pleaded guilty to escape from jail and second conviction. Pittenturf faces sentence for the above charges and also for the Hanson B. Hoar assault and robbery of last July for which he was found guilty.

Lorrie Toulay pleaded guilty to the charge of being a tramp.

Tom White, colored, was found guilty on a charge of larceny of coal from a car on a local railroad.

A nol pros was entered in the case of assault and battery against J. Jere Plank brought by Harry C. Gilbert following an altercation over the feeding of some stock which had been sold at Mr. Plank's stable to Mr. Gilbert.

A nol pros was also entered in each of the following cases:

Com. vs. Harry Rebert. Assault and battery. On oath of Joseph Leister.

Com. vs. C. G. Hartlaub. Assault and battery. On oath of Peter Gebhart.

Com. vs. John Lynn. False pretense. On oath of Daniel Shealer. R. S. Shriver was appointed guardian of the minor children of William H. Williams, deceased, late of Cumberland township.

The list of criminal cases has been disposed of and other matters are now before the Court.

BUILDING IN SPRING

Contractors and builders report that considerable activity will be seen in building operations in Gettysburg with the opening of the spring. A number of persons contemplate putting up residences and are considering plans for their new homes but few have yet arranged to have their work done. C. S. Reaser will build a large colonial style residence on Hanover street and John Crowe, the local architect, is preparing the plans. Several changes in business buildings are also under contemplation so that with the opening of warm weather much work will be taken up.

The two big contracts, St. James church and the new federal building, will last the greater part of the summer and the federal building will continue through the fall according to present expectations.

Elsewhere in the county similar conditions will exist. Biglerville reports its usual winter rumors of building operations to be taken up in the spring and it is expected that these rumors will materialize as they have always done in the past.

FARMERS CLAIM WHEAT IS HURT

Say Freezing Nights are Making Trouble for Wheat which had been Protected by Snow. Rabbits after Trees.

Just now farmers in the county are complaining of the great damage which is being done the wheat and grass fields. It is stated that the damage has all been done since the wheat came out from under the snow.

It is explained that a coating of snow over the wheat is to be desired at all times during the cold spells of winter. The wheat came out in excellent shape, from under the snow which protected it during the 20 degrees below zero weather and the damage has been done in the few days the wheat has been uncovered since the snow has melted.

The ground was frozen to quite a depth and all of this has not drawn from the ground. The snow above melting cannot penetrate the ground and the water stands in small puddles all over the fields or has the ground water logged. The nights have been just cold enough to freeze this ice and this melts during the day. Such conditions, it is claimed, do more damage to wheat and grass fields than all other things combined.

It has always been held that plenty of snow during a winter presages a good wheat yield the following summer. This is caused, it is said, by the snow containing a certain amount of nitrogen, which is absorbed by the wheat plants during their imprisonment. It is pointed out that wheat always comes out from under a coating of snow much greater than when it went under. Again, real cold cannot penetrate the snow and it has been seen that where snow covers the frozen ground for a long period of time, that all the frost will be drawn from the ground. This is attributed to the fact that latent heat, which is present in the ground is at all times drawn toward the surface, and as it does not pass through the snow, it warms the ground about and takes from it all the frost.

From persons who have apple orchards comes the report that on account of the long time which the snow remained on the ground this winter, rabbits have been forced to eat the bark from around the apple trees as a source of food. As long as the ground is uncovered, rabbits as a rule do not pay much attention to apple trees, although they will gnaw an occasional tree. It is reported that quite a number have been ruined by rabbits and will have to be planted over. The rabbit takes the bark from around the trunk of the tree, completely cutting off its sap supply.

TWO MINSTREL PLAYERS HURT

George F. Kelly, of Claremont, N. H., and P. C. Hayes, of Indianapolis, Ind., members of John W. Vogel's minstrels, which will appear at the Wizard Theatre, February 13, died Tuesday at a hospital in Binghamton, N. Y., as the result of injuries sustained in a wreck on the Lackawanna railroad at Chanango Forks, early Tuesday. Mrs. John Vogel is suffering from nervous shock and James Conroy of Bridgeport, Conn.; Carl Heiman, of Dayton, Ohio, and Engineer Frank Curran, of Syracuse, are also badly hurt at the hospital.

Train No. 812 on the Utica division of the Lackawanna was standing on the main track when the locomotive of train No. 912 crashed into the sleeper in which were 27 members of the minstrel company. The actors were thrown from their berths and scalded by escaping steam and hot water.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT

George W. Wunsch, a Western Union telegraph lineman, will probably lose the sight of his left eye as the result of an accident while trimming a tree along the Western Maryland Railroad near Highfield. He was out with a gang of men and was on top of a pole trimming some trees when one of the branches struck him over the forehead. One of the sprigs brushed over his eyes and badly lacerated the left one and bruised the other. He was barely able to descend the pole. When he reached the ground he collapsed from the severe pain. He is now confined to his bed under the care of a physician.

SIXTY MEN TO WORK AT MINE

Copper Mine in Western End of the County to Afford Constant Employment to Large Force of Laborers.

The continuous employment of sixty men at the copper mines of the Eagle Metallic Company in the western end of the county is promised.

The work done at the mine has been chiefly the digging of ore. The smelter has been working very little since its installation, owing to there being no way, at present, to take care of the great amount of slag.

Two tracks are being laid, running from the smelter to the dump, which will be used to carry the slag away by means of small cars. There is also being placed another cable and another engine, to be used in lifting the ore from the shaft.

When the smelter is put in operation it will be kept busy, and will not be stopped again, unless some mishap befalls the machinery.

Work will be resumed this week, according to present plans.

ARENDTSTVILLE

Arendtville, Jan. 24.—Owing to the good sleighing last week the fair held by the Mountain Valley Band of this place every evening during the week was largely attended. The gross receipts were $324.09 leaving a net balance of $175.48. They are now out of debt. They extend their thanks to the citizens of this place and vicinity for their liberal patronage shown at their fair. They have a new set of instruments.

The ladies of the Arendtville Fire Hearth Circle have presented the Reformed congregation of this place with a new set of individual communion cups.

The Centre Mills school and the Biglerville school each visited the school in this place recently. They came in sleighs and sleds and the scholars enjoyed the ride greatly.

Miss Stella R. Trostle is visiting in the home of her brother, Rev. Ira Trostle, at Dillsburg.

Miss Mary L. Boyer, of this place, is the guest of Miss Malvina Gardner at York Springs.

Paul Bream, who is a student at Mercersburg Academy, was home on Wednesday the 17th inst. to attend the funeral of Alex. J. Bucher, his grandfather.

At this writing we have mild weather and bright sunshine which has finished the sleighing and the jingle of the merry sleigh bells is silenced again but in their stead we hear the increased cackle of the laying hens and no doubt the high price of eggs will soon drop.

Amos Minter of this place, who had a severe paralytic stroke about ten days ago is slowly improving.

CHARLES ANTHONY

Charles Anthony, a life long resident and one of Hanover's most estimable citizens, died at his home, Monday night at 8 o'clock, after an illness of five days from pneumonia. His age was 58 years, 5 months and 25 days.

He was a son of the late William and Eliza Anthony, and he was the last surviving member of the family. In 1872 he was united in marriage to Miss Mary C. Newman, who survives him, with the following children: Mrs. Luther C. Plank, of Table Rock; William Anthony, Oliver N. Anthony, Mrs. Ralph Sprengle, Julia Anthony and Carl Anthony, all of Hanover.

Funeral Thursday, January 25, services at the house at 1:30 p. m., Rev. A. S. Dechant officiating. Interment on the family lot in Mt. Olivet cemetery, Hanover.

PROF. SANDERS'

NEW TRANSLATION

The Macmillan Co. is publishing another translation by Professor Charles F. Sanders, of Springs avenue, the "Brief History of Modern Philosophy" by Harold Hotelling. The former work, "Jerusalem's Introduction to Philosophy," which appeared about a year ago, is meeting with wide success. It is being used as a text book in a large number of colleges and universities. The current number of The Philosophical Review contains the following with reference to it: "The book is an excellent introduction to philosophy and for many reasons one of the very best. The translator tells us that he was led to his undertaking by the excellence of the author's method of presentation. The subject matter is indeed admirably arranged and its emphases just. The translator has made the author speak attractively forcible English. The book as a whole performs exceptionally well that task which it is so hard to perform through a mere book—the task of persuading the student that as the author says, 'the most important thing in philosophy is philosophizing'."

LOCAL ROAD INCLUDED

The new state road from Harrisburg to Gettysburg will likely be included in the advertisement for construction of several sections of the Sprout main highways act which allows the Commonwealth to pay fifty per cent of the cost, will be made early in the Spring by the State Highway Department. Surveys and estimates of cost have been made on the applications filed by counties with Commissioner Bigelow and he hopes to get work started as soon as the snow disappears.

The contractors on the Lewistown "Narrows" and on the national pike in the southwestern part of the state have kept their forces assembled during the winter and will be able to resume work at an early day. Work on the old southern road is regarded as one of the likely operations.

MAY CHANGE RATES

Local members of the Modern Woodmen of America are very much interested in the adjourned meeting of the order, in session in Chicago, as the insurance rates of the order will, in all probability, be changed.

The change is not made because the order cannot meet its death claims, but it is beyond the age of 50 years that losses are more frequent and demand higher rates if the insurance feature is to be kept up. It is on this account that a slight increase must be made on the younger members. The order has never adopted the Fraternal Congress rates. It is not known just what the increase will be.

BATH TUB TRUST MUST FACE TRIAL

Court Rules Oil Decision Does Not Bar Action.

WON'T QUASH INDICTMENTS

Judge Angell, in Detroit, in Ruling Against the Plea, Says the Law is Clear.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 24.—United States District Judge Angell denied the motion made in behalf of the Corwell Lead company, of New York, to quash the indictments in the government's criminal case against the "bath tub trust."

This reinstates the case, which is scheduled to come up for trial on Jan. 30. There are about forty defendants. In making his decision Judge Angell referred to the supreme court's decision in the Standard Oil case and said:

"I see no reason to suppose that in delivering its opinion in the Standard Oil case the supreme court of the United States intended to render impossible criminal prosecutions under the Sherman act, and I am unable to conclude that it did render them impossible."

"The supreme court held that the words contract, etc., in restraint of trade were not to be interpreted with literal strictness, but reasonably in the light of common law."

"The act does not leave a citizen without any standard by which in advance of a verdict or decree he may determine whether his action will amount to reasonable restraint of trade."

"On generally selected principles all contracts whose sole or main aim and primary object is to stifle competition, enhance prices and promote monopoly are unenforceable and void."

"If the class of contracts which are unenforceable because in restraint of trade is reasonably certain and if the act, as interpreted, forbids the making of contracts of that class, there is reasonable certainty as to what is forbidden by the act."

"If the act is now to be understood to mean that such contracts are forbidden as are void upon established legal principles apart from the act itself, it cannot properly be said that guilt or innocence depends upon nothing but the determination of the tribunal before which, after the event, a person may be tried."

As to the averment that the indictments do not state that the alleged restraint of trade is unreasonable or undue, Judge Angell said that the indictments set out facts showing that the alleged restraint was unreasonable and that the defendant was fairly advised as to what it had to meet at the trial.

Upon the contention of the defense that no overt act after the alleged completion of a conspiracy was shown, Judge Angell ruled that the facts presented as overt acts could fairly be considered as acts done in pursuance of the combination and conspiracy alleged to have been completed.

"If it should be shown," added the court, "that no combination or conspiracy was completed prior to the date alleged as the date of the performance of overt acts, a serious question may have to be met as to the jurisdiction of this court."

FINE STANDARD OIL $55,000

Found Guilty of Rebates, But Escape $2,860,000 Penalty.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 21.—Judge Hazel, in the United States district court, imposed a fine of $55,000 upon the Standard Oil company for violations of the Elkins law in accepting rebates on shipments of oil from Olean to Burlington, Vt.

The Standard was found guilty upon 143 counts and under the provision of the law a maximum penalty of $25,000 was possible in each count which, had such a fine been imposed, would have aggregated $2,860,000. The case occupied the attention of the United States district court for more than a year.

Official Cleared of Forgery.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 24.—Joseph G. Armstrong, director of public works of Pittsburg, was acquitted of forgery in court. The charge was brought by the Voters' Civic League in connection with the certification of the city pay rolls that laborers were at work in the various bureaus of his department when a holiday had been granted to them on election day.

Man Who Opened Fire on Sumter Dead. New York, Jan. 24.—Captain Julius A. Sitgreaves, a Confederate veteran, seventy-four years old, whose company was in the attack on Fort Sumter in 1861, and who was credited with having fired the first gun on the fort, died suddenly while sitting at his editorial desk in the office of an art publication. Apoplexy was ascribed as the cause of death.

Queen Wilhelmina Better. The Hague, Holland, Jan. 24.—An official communication confirms the report that the hopes of the birth of an heir to the throne of the Netherlands had been shattered. THREE COLORED MEN AND WOMAN LYNCHED

Georgia Mob Hangs and Shoots Murder Suspects.

Hamilton, Ga., Jan. 24.—A mob of 100 men broke into the Harris county jail here, overpowered Jailer E. M. Robinson, took three colored men and one colored woman out and hanged them to trees one mile from town. The bodies were filled with bullets. It is estimated that 300 shots were fired.

The lynching has aroused the State and word was received from Atlanta that Governor Slaton has ordered a special investigation into the outrage.

The colored people were arrested charged with the murder of Norman Hadley, a well-to-do farmer. Hadley was killed Sunday night as he sat in his home, a shot being fired from the outside. The blacks were tenants of the Hadley farm. They were Bell, Hathaway, John Moore, Eugene Hamling and "Dusty" Crutchfield.

Sheriff Hadley, uncle of the murder victim, did not believe there would be a lynching, and had gone to Columbus. As soon as he heard of the lynching he returned and began an investigation.

Despite the pleas of Jailer Robinson the mob advanced on the jail and broke the doors down. The terrified prisoners were hustled out at the point of guns and married outside of the town. There they quickly strung up.

Immediately their writhing bodies became shrouded against the sky, revolvers and rifles blazing forth.

The victims protested their innocence to the last. No motive for the killing of Hadley, who was popular, is known.

RICHESON FAILING FAST

May Not Live to Go to Electric Chair, Says Sheriff.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 24.—Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, under death sentence for the murder of his former fiancée, Miss Avis Linnell, will not live long, according to a statement made by Sheriff John Quinn.

"I do not believe that Richeson will live until the week of May 19, when his execution is scheduled to take place," said the sheriff.

This statement was made to members of the prison council, who were investigating the Charles street jail Richeson, he said, is failing fast, both physically and mentally.

STEEL TRUST IS BOYCOTTED

No Dealings With Harvester Co. For Five Years.

SALESMEN STARTED DISPUTE

President Farrell Surprises Probers by Telling of Quarrel Between the Two Corporations.

Washington, Jan. 24.—James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation, surprised the Stanley "steel trust" investigating committee with the statement that the Steel corporation and the International Harvester company have had no business dealings with each other for a period of five or six years.

The information, coming on the eve of a proposed investigation of the Harvester company by congress, in which it was sought to show as one existing condition that the Harvester company and the Steel corporation had interlocking directors and that the latter gave rebates to the former on steel, was doubly surprising.

Representative McMillin, of Maine, questioned President Farrell about the export business of the Steel corporation and rebates given to certain companies.

"Isn't it a fact that the International Harvester company gets larger rebates than are granted smaller concerns?" Mr. McMillin asked.

"We have done no business with the International Harvester company whatever for five or six years," Mr. Farrell replied. "The International Harvester company has had a boycott on this corporation. It all grew out of a controversy with one of our subsidiary companies and the Harvester company. It started as a mere squabble between salesmen and resulted in a complete severance of business relations. There is absolutely nothing in common between us. We don't do business with them."

Among the board of directors of the United States Steel corporation are Albert H. Gary, George F. Baker, Norman B. Ream and George W. Perkins, all of whom are also directors of the International Harvester company. Mr. Gary is chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation and Mr. Perkins is chairman of the finance committee of the International Harvester company.

President Farrell was interrogated at length relative to a reported international organization of steel manufacturers to control the price of steel rails. He explained that European manufacturers had such an organization, but that the United States Steel corporation was not a party to it.

Asked by Mr. Beall if officials of the Steel corporation, when they decided to change prices, were not bound to tell their competitors, President Farrell answered in the negative.

"There is no understanding that such notification should be given," he continued. "Whenever a change of prices is made competitors find it out within ten minutes. If I should meet a competitor on the street or at lunch I would not hesitate to tell him we were going to make a change in prices if one had been decided upon."

President Farrell denied in response to questions by Chairman Stanley that the Steel corporation gave any rebates or discounts to the Standard Oil company on tin plate for cans.

"The minutes of the Carnegie company," said Mr. Stanley, "show that rebates were given to the Standard Oil tin plate."

"Before or after the formation of the Steel corporation?" asked Attorney Teed.

"Afterward," said the chairman. "Since I have been president of the Steel corporation," said Mr. Farrell, "all tin plate has been sold to the Standard Oil company and all other companies at a flat price."

NEW MOVE IN BUTTER FIGHT

Plan to Lower Oleo Tax For Benefit of People.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Congressman Asbury S. Lever of South Carolina, chairman of a subcommittee of the house committee on agriculture, has declared war on the butter trust. He will report to the full committee a bill to reduce the government tax on oleomargarine from 10 cents to less than 1 cent a pound. Mr. Lever has the assurance that the committee will accept his bill and send it to the house, where an earnest effort will be made to pass it this month.

Corporations Held Up in 1904.

Washington, Jan. 24.—"We know corporations engaged in interstate commerce were intimidated and blackmailed for campaign contributions," said Senator Culberson in reviewing the alleged activities of national committees in 1904. He was urging action on his resolution providing for an investigation. "The year 1904 surpassed all others in the audacity and indecency with which campaign funds were demanded," he said. Lists were read to show that Republicans in 1896, 1900 and 1904 received far larger contributions than the Democrats.

THINKS DAUGHTER WAS SLAIN

Allentown Girl's Father Doubts Story She Ended Life in River.

Allentown, Pa., Jan. 24.—"I do not believe that my daughter committed suicide by jumping into the Lehigh river at Bethlehem, and am of the opinion that she was done to her death," said George Vogel, of this city, father of Florence Vogel, the pretty eighteen-year-old Allentown girl, whose body was found on Sunday at Island Park, ten miles below Bethlehem, where she is alleged to have jumped into the river on Halloween night after a tiff with her fiancé, Emmett McBride.

"I shall do all in my power to have the mystery of my daughter's death solved," continued Mr. Vogel. "I do not want to get anybody who is innocent into trouble, but if her death came about through illegal means and not of her own volition, I think on the other hand that the guilty ones should be brought to justice."

Mr. Vogel says he believes in the story of John Morgan, a Bethlehem restaurant keeper, that he saw two men carry Florence Vogel along the street leading to the old covered bridge at Bethlehem, from which a few minutes later she is said to have jumped to her death.

Mr. Vogel is very bitter because these young men, against whom he has brought prosecution, and who, he said, started stories that his daughter had jumped into the river merely for a lark, swam out, and was seen later at various road houses. The proprietors of these road houses deny she ever was there after the alleged suicide.

MOTHER AND CHILDREN DIE OF MEASLES

Husband and Father Only Survivor of Family.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Jan. 24.—Thomas Atherholt is the only survivor of a family of four which was stricken with measles last week.

His wife and two children are dead, and a visit of the stork also ended with the death of the mother. Mrs. Atherholt was twenty years old. She was stricken with measles and removed to a hospital last week.

Ruth, aged three years, was next stricken, and the mother was not informed of her illness. A fifteen-month-old baby next fell a victim and died almost at once.

Mrs. Atherholt and her little daughter grew no better and they developed complications which soon ended their life. The mother and daughter were buried in the same casket alongside of the infant. The husband is the only one left.

YUAN DEPOSED; NOW FOR WAR

Visits Palace and Advises Dowager Empress to Resume Hostilities.

Peking, China, Jan. 24.—Defeated in his plans to bring about the abdication of the Chinese throne, and deposed, placing the Manchus again in charge, Yuan Shih Kai secretly visited the imperial palace and conferred with the empress dowager in favor of a resumption of hostilities.

He suggested that the Manchus sink their differences wholeheartedly and provide the necessary funds for the campaign, but advised awaiting the advance of the revolutionaries.

The empress dowager is reported inclined to believe that a resumption of hostilities is the only solution of the situation.

The situation in Peking has undergone an extraordinary change. The imperial family has reversed its policy and abandoned all thought of abdication. Yuan Shih Kai has stepped aside, and the whole control is in the hands of General Yin Teheng, who was credited a few days ago with recommending a general massacre of the Chinese by the Manchus.

The foreign legations consider that the abdication of the throne has been deferred only for a time.

Feet Cut Off by Car.

Allentown, Pa., Jan. 24.—Coasting at high speed down a steep hill into a passing trolley car, Charles Devez, a fifteen-year-old Coplay boy, had both his feet cut off, suffered a fractured collarbone and several bruises. He is in the Allentown hospital, with the chances against him.

CHAPTER XXI.

Ruggles Returns.

Dan did not fall asleep until morning, and then he dreamed of Blairtown and the church and a summer evening and something like the drone of the flies on the window pane soothed him, and came into his waking thoughts, for at noon he was violently shaken by the shoulder and a man's voice called him as he opened his eyes and looked into Ruggles' face.

"Gee Whittaker!" Ruggles exclaimed. "You are one of the seven sleepers! I've been here something like seventeen minutes, whistling and making all kinds of barnyard noises."

As Dan welcomed him, rubbing the sleep from his eyes, Ruggles told him that he had come over "the pond" just for the wedding.

"There isn't going to be any wedding, Josh! Got out of all that last night."

Ruggles had the breakfast card in his hand, which the waiter had brought in, and Dan, taking it from his friend, ordered a big breakfast.

"I'm as hungry as the dickens, Ruggles, and I guess you are, too."

"What was the matter with the duchess?" Ruggles asked. "Were you too young for her, or not rich enough?"

Significantly the boy answered: "One too many, Josh," and Ruggles winced at the response.

"Here are the fellows with my trunks and things," he announced as the porters came in with his luggage. "Just drop them there, boys; they're going to fix some kind of a room later."

Blair's long silk-lined coat lay on a chair where he had flung it, his hat beside it, and Ruggles went over to the corner and lifted up a fragrant glove. It was one of Letty Lane's gloves which Dan had found in the motor and taken possession of. The young man had gone to his dressing room and begun running his bath, and Ruggles, laying the glove on the table, said to himself:

"I knew he would get rid of the duchess, all right."

But when Dan came back into the room later in his dressing gown-for breakfast, Ruggles said:

"You'll have to send her back her glove, Dannie."

At the sight of it beside the breakfast tray Dan blushed scarlet. He picked up the fragrant object.

"That's all right; I'll take care of it."

"Is 'Mandalay' running the same as ever?" Ruggles asked over his bacon and eggs.

"Same as ever."

Ruggles saw he had not returned in vain, and that he was destined to take up his part of the business just as he had laid it out for himself to Lord Goreley. "It's up to me now; I'll have to take care of the actress, and I'm darned if I haven't got a job. If Dan colors up like that at the sight of her glove, I wonder what he does when he holds her hand!"

CHAPTER XXII.

What Will You Take?

When Dan, on the minute of two, went to the Savoy, Higgins, as was his custom, did not meet him. Miss Lane met him herself. She was reading a letter by the table, and when Dan was announced she put it back in its envelope. Blair had seen her only in soft clinging dresses, in white visionary clothes, or in her dazzling part costume, where the play dress of the dancer displayed her beauty and her charms. Today she wore a tall, narrow dress, and in her dark cloth dress, in her small hat, she seemed a new woman—some one he hadn't known and did not know, and he experienced the thrill a man always feels when the woman he loves appears in an unaccustomed dress and suggests a new mystery.

"Oh, I say! You're not going out, are you?"

In the lapel of her close little coat was a flower he had given her. He wanted to lean forward and kiss it as it rested there. She assured him:

"I have just come in; had an early lunch and took a long walk—think of it! I haven't taken a walk alone since I can remember!"

Her walk had given her only the ghost of a flush, which rose over her delicate skin, fading away like a furling flag. Her frailness, her slenderness, the air of good breeding her dress gave her, added to Dan's deepening emotions. She seemed infinitely dear, and a thing to be protected and fostered.

"Can't you sit down for a minute? I've come to make you a real call."

"Of course," she laughed. "But, first, I must answer this letter."

His jealousy rose and he caught hold of her hand that held the envelope. "Look here, you are not to write it if it is to that damned sound-dreel. I took you away from him last night and you are never to see him again."

For the first time the two really looked at each other. Her lips parted as though she would reprove him, and the boy murmured:

"That's all right. I mean what I say—never to see him again! Will you promise me? Promise me—I can't bear it! I won't have it!"

A film of emotion crossed his clear young eyes and his slender hands were held fast in his clasp. His face was beautiful in its tenderness and in a righteous anger as he bent it on her. Instead of reproving him as she had done before, instead of snatching away her hands, she swayed, and at the sight of her weakness his eyes cleared, and the film lifted like a curtain. She was not fainting, but, as her face turned toward him, he saw it transformed, and Dan caught her in her dark dress, the flowers in her bodice, to his heart. He held her as if he had snatched her from a wreck and in a safe embrace lifted her high to the shore of a coral strand. He kissed her, first timidly, wonderingly, with the sacrament of first love on his lips. Then he kissed her as his heart bade him, and when he set her free she was crying, but the tears on his face were not all her tears.

"Little boy, how crazy, how perfectly crazy!" Oh, Dan—Dan!

She clung to him, looking up at him just as his boy-dreams had told him a girl would look some day. Her face was suffused and softened, her lips—her coral-red, fine, lovely lips—were trembling, and her eyes were as gray, as profound as those seas his imagination had longed to explore. Made poet for the first time in his life, as his arms were around her, he whispered: "You are all my dreams come true. If any man comes near you I'll kill him just as sure as fate. I'll kill him!"

"Hush, hush! I told you you were crazy. We're both perfectly mad. I have tried my best not to come to this with you. What would your father say? Let me go, let me go; I'll call Higgins."

The boy laughed aloud, the laugh of happy youth. He held her so close that she might as well have tried to loose herself from an iron image of the Spanish Inquisition as from his young arms. This slender, delicious, willowy thing he held was Letty Lane, the adored star London went mad over; the triumph of it! It flashed through him as his pulses beat and his heart was high with the conquest, but it was to the woman only that he whispered:

"I've said a lot of stuff and I am likely to say a lot more, but I want you to say something to me. Don't you love me?"

The word on his lips to him was as strange, as wonderful, as though it had been made for him.

away from him. He got out before her and helped her from the car. "Well, I've got a piece of news to tell you. I have broken my engagement with the duchess."

This brought her back far enough into life to make her exclaim: "Oh, I am glad! That's perfectly fine! I don't know when I've heard anything that pleased me so much. Come and see me tomorrow and tell me all about it."

"Oh, I say! You're not going out, are you?"

In the lapel of her close little coat was a flower he had given her. He wanted to lean forward and kiss it as it rested there. She assured him:

"I have just come in; had an early lunch and took a long walk—think of it! I haven't taken a walk alone since I can remember!"

Her walk had given her only the ghost of a flush, which rose over her delicate skin, fading away like a furling flag. Her frailness, her slenderness, the air of good breeding her dress gave her, added to Dan's deepening emotions. She seemed infinitely dear, and a thing to be protected and fostered.

"Can't you sit down for a minute? I've come to make you a real call."

"Of course," she laughed. "But, first, I must answer this letter."

His jealousy rose and he caught hold of her hand that held the envelope. "Look here, you are not to write it if it is to that damned sound-dreel. I took you away from him last night and you are never to see him again."

For the first time the two really looked at each other. Her lips parted as though she would reprove him, and the boy murmured:

"That's all right. I mean what I say—never to see him again! Will you promise me? Promise me—I can't bear it! I won't have it!"

A film of emotion crossed his clear young eyes and his slender hands were held fast in his clasp. His face was beautiful in its tenderness and in a righteous anger as he bent it on her. Instead of reproving him as she had done before, instead of snatching away her hands, she swayed, and at the sight of her weakness his eyes cleared, and the film lifted like a curtain. She was not fainting, but, as her face turned toward him, he saw it transformed, and Dan caught her in her dark dress, the flowers in her bodice, to his heart. He held her as if he had snatched her from a wreck and in a safe embrace lifted her high to the shore of a coral strand. He kissed her, first timidly, wonderingly, with the sacrament of first love on his lips. Then he kissed her as his heart bade him, and when he set her free she was crying, but the tears on his face were not all her tears.

"Little boy, how crazy, how perfectly crazy!" Oh, Dan—Dan!

She clung to him, looking up at him just as his boy-dreams had told him a girl would look some day. Her face was suffused and softened, her lips—her coral-red, fine, lovely lips—were trembling, and her eyes were as gray, as profound as those seas his imagination had longed to explore. Made poet for the first time in his life, as his arms were around her, he whispered: "You are all my dreams come true. If any man comes near you I'll kill him just as sure as fate. I'll kill him!"

"Hush, hush! I told you you were crazy. We're both perfectly mad. I have tried my best not to come to this with you. What would your father say? Let me go, let me go; I'll call Higgins."

The boy laughed aloud, the laugh of happy youth. He held her so close that she might as well have tried to loose herself from an iron image of the Spanish Inquisition as from his young arms. This slender, delicious, willowy thing he held was Letty Lane, the adored star London went mad over; the triumph of it! It flashed through him as his pulses beat and his heart was high with the conquest, but it was to the woman only that he whispered:

"I've said a lot of stuff and I am likely to say a lot more, but I want you to say something to me. Don't you love me?"

The word on his lips to him was as strange, as wonderful, as though it had been made for him.

ROOSEVELT IS STILL SILENT

Denies Making Known Position on Nomination.

HE ISSUES A STATEMENT

Declares If He Has Anything to Say About Presidential Nomination He Will Make It Over His Signature.

New York, Jan. 24.—In spite of the fact that several persons who have called on Colonel Roosevelt recently have made statements purporting to set forth the colonel's position relative to the presidential nomination, Colonel Roosevelt himself said that he has not yet made known his plans.

It has been Mr. Roosevelt's rule not to comment upon reports of this kind. He broke the rule after a newspaper had said that Mr. Roosevelt in conversation with James Yurann, of Blue Rapids, Kansas, had stated that while he was not seeking the nomination he "would serve his country if needed."

Mr. Yurann, said to be one of the original Roosevelt supporters in Kansas, called on the colonel at The Outlook office. Later Mr. Harper, the colonel's secretary, said that the paper in which the alleged conversation was printed was not represented at the meeting.

Mr. Harper consulted with Mr. Roosevelt, and then gave out the following statement from the ex-president:

"Mr. Yurann is a total stranger, although I have a vague recollection of his having called once before. It is, of course, an absurdity to suppose that I would select such a means to make known my position. If at any time I have any statement to make I will make it over my own signature."

Earlier in the day Colonel Roosevelt went to the Grand Central station to meet his son, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., who arrived from San Francisco, with his wife, who was Miss Eleanor Alexander, and their infant daughter. It was the first time that Colonel Roosevelt had seen his new granddaughter.

After seeing a few visitors at The Outlook office and spending a short time at his desk, Mr. Roosevelt walked up to Ambassador Reid's home on Fifth avenue, where he was one of the guests at a luncheon at which the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and their daughter, the Princess Patricia, were present.

HITCHCOCK IS LOYAL

Declares He Is For Taft as Strong as a Man Can Be.

Washington, Jan. 24.—"I am for Taft as strong as a man can be," said Postmaster-General Hitchcock, at the White House.

"I did not realize until a day or two ago how far these stories about my alleged differences with the President had gone. I probably shall have something to say on the subject."

Mr. Hitchcock manifested much indignation that his loyalty had been questioned.

STORIES OF CAMP AND WAR

BLOWING UP VICKSBURG FORT

Chicago Man Tells of Attempt to Capture Fort Hill—Shells Fired in Every Direction.

Oscar Ludwig, now living in Chicago, enlisted in the Twentieth Illinois regiment, won his first commission as lieutenant at Vicksburg and left the army after four years of service with the title of captain. At the siege of Vicksburg, of which he has told the story, he was sergeant-major.

"We were trying to capture a strong-hold back of Vicksburg," he said. "It was at the top of a hill and we knew it as Fort Hill. We couldn't get up to it. They surrendered only when they were starved out. We made an attack on it one day and gained the pits at the foot of the embankment.

"A Ditch Was Started."

We could get no farther and stayed there until night, when we retreated, one by one, under cover of the darkness.

"Then we were set to work to dig a tunnel. A ditch was started at some distance from the fort and advanced up the hill under the protection of some cotton bales that were pushed on ahead. In the protection of this trench the men could approach the fort and they also carried up a wooden mortar that tossed shells into the fort without needing a large charge of powder. Our tunnel was begun and driven under the walls of the fort. The defenders of the place sank a counter tunnel, but they did not come near us. At last, when all was ready gunpowder was carried to the end of the hole under the fort and there it was shot off. The explosion tore a breach in the wall, but we were not able to rush it. Three men were thrown into the air and fell on the outside of the wall, and so we carried them back to the lines. Two were mortally hurt, but the other, a slave boy, was not.

"One of the men asked him: 'What were you doing in there fighting us?' 'The boy was sitting rolling his eyes. 'I wasn't fighting you,' he said. 'What were you doing, then?' 'Totting grub for the colonel.' 'What colonel is that?' 'Colonel up de Louisiana Tigers.' 'What were you working for him for?' 'Colonel told me not to quit till I'd toted him grub. I set down his dinner and den I felt myself a growin' wings an' arising up in de air, an' went up about fo' miles an' started to come down agin, an' on de way down I met de colonel agin' up.'

"There were shells fired at us and at the rebels from every direction. Fort Hill was throwing shells toward Logan's camp and our boats in the river were shelling the city. I remember seeing eight shells in the air at one time. At night each shell is a ball of blue fire, turning over and over and rising up and up until it seems to stand still, and then whirling down on the curve toward the earth. The shells from the fort came within 200 yards of Logan's camp. I was sitting there writing the sergeant-major's report one day when a shell came along and clipped off the branch of the tree above me. At another time I was sitting in a house writing the report when a shot came through the wall. The other men did not seem worried about it and I inquired why. One man pointed out to me that all the holes made by shot were in the upper part of the room. The guns of the fort on the hill could not be depressed far enough to send the shot lower and so the only harm done was to the plaster near the ceiling.

Hard to Realize.

The variety of ways in which a given number of articles may be placed has often created much surprise. A mathematician once set himself to the task of calculating the number of different ways in which the fifty-two cards of a pack could be distributed among four players, thirteen to each, taking every possible combination. It would be useless to present the answer here in a long row of figures, for no one can realize what such a numerical array really means, but the following illustration can be readily grasped:

If the entire population of the earth, say one thousand millions of persons, were to deal the cards continually, day and night, for one hundred millions of years, at the rate of a deal by each person a minute, they would not have exhausted the one hundred thousandth part of the number of essentially different ways in which it is possible that the cards can be so distributed.

HORSES IN COLD WEATHER.

Harm Comes to Them Only When Permitted to Become Wet.

In operating my farm of 1,280 acres I need at least thirty head of horses. I am a North Dakota correspondent of Orange Judd Farmer. There is little trouble in keeping them in good condition during the winter. I never have had trouble of any kind. The cheapest feeds are oats and flax straw and native hay with oats as our grain. Every barn should have good ventilation and plenty of light. I always turn all horses out during the day. In the winter they find protection around the big strawstacks. This is sufficient to keep them in good condition no matter how cold it is. They are always turned into the lot no matter if the temperature drops to thirty degrees below zero, providing, of course, it is not storming. Dry cold is not injurious, and it is only when horses get wet that harm results.

Attention should be given to the fitting of harness to colts when beginning to work. It is of great importance that collars should fit snugly, and it is well to see that the shoulders are not bruised. When first beginning work in the spring the work should be light until the team is hardened. During the first day the distance of ten miles traveling is sufficient. This may be increased to twelve to eighteen miles as soon as the team gets into condition.

Suckling colts should be very well taken care of. The stables should be tight so that no wind gets in through cracks. Light should be admitted through windows. The suckling colts should be kept by themselves during the winter, as the others usually crowd them out of shelter. Colts require more warmth or shelter than work horses or brood mares. When they get wet it is quite serious.

The silver fox, one of the most highly prized of fur bearing animals, is not a distinct species that propagates its kind, but a sport from the red fox family.

A GREAT LAWYER SAID

"If I had my way" a famous lawyer once said "I would make good health as contagious as measles."

Just think of it—suppose you could catch good health as easily as you catch cold, this would be a poor world for doctors and druggists.

Mrs. T. A. Trapp who lives in Arlington, N. J., has found the next best thing to catching good health. She says "A few weeks ago I contracted a cough which annoyed me a great deal as I was badly run down at the time. It kept me awake at night and distressed me greatly. After two weeks of this I began to take Vinol and one bottle not only caused my cough to disappear but I feel much better in every way and can sleep well again."

If you can't literally "catch" good health, you can at least recover it and build yourself up by taking our delicious cod liver and iron remedy, Vinol. It makes weak folks strong, and we guarantee it to give perfect satisfaction. Your money back if it does not. People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa.

DEATH OF CIVIL WAR ENGINEER

Jacob Reiley, War Time Resident of Gettysburg, and Engineer on Old Hanover and Gettysburg Railroad, Dies in Illinois.

He was a resident of Gettysburg during the Civil War and had the reputation of having hauled more soldiers than any other engineer—remaining on his engine day and night for a continuous period of three months.

Mrs. Reiley who was a Gettysburg girl is a prominent W. C. T. GETTYSBURG 27 ST. MARY'S 25

Basket Ball Team from Local College Triumphs Over Rivals at Emmitsburg in Exciting and Well Played Game.

In a cleverly played basketball game, full of sensations and exciting throughout, Gettysburg College defeated Mount St. Mary's at Emmitsburg Wednesday night, 27 to 25.

A number of enthusiastic rooters accompanied the team and were well repaid for their chilly trip. Brumbaugh's return to the game was signalized by many brilliant plays while Beegle's vigorous guarding of the two Emmitsburg forwards saved Gettysburg at a number of critical points.

The first half ended with the score tied at 12 points. The Mountaineers entered the second half with a rush and in five minutes they succeeded in securing four baskets. Gettysburg then took a spurt and the contest was tied up. Gettysburg, taking advantage of one misplay, made a basket. Two more and a foul followed.

Brumbaugh's all round floor work brought victory. He was all over the floor and was continually on the jump. For Mount St. Mary's, Costello played his usual brilliant game. Captain Malloy played an excellent floor game and his two shots from the centre of the court were sensational. The line up:
Gettysburg Position Mt. St. Mary's
Flahner, Capt. Forward Quigley
Diehl Forward Costello
Leathers Centre Gaughan
Brumbaugh Guard Malloy, Capt.
Beegle Guard Letters

Field goal—Diehl 3, Leathers, Brumbaugh 8, Quigley 2, Costello 4, Gaughan 2, Malloy 2, Letters 2. Fouls—Flahner 3, Costello. Timekeepers—Mr. Cogan, Mt. St. Mary's; Mr. Fritsch, Gettysburg. Referee—Mr. Liddy.

On January 11 Gettysburg defeated Mt. St. Mary's on the local floor 27-17. The treatment given the visitors in each instance was most courteous and friendly relations seem again to be firmly established between the two schools.

PLENTY OF EXCITEMENT

S. M. Bushman, who is on the Ham-burg American cruise around the world has had plenty of excitement according to dispatches from the Far East where the "Cleveland" is now located. A special cable from Honolulu to the Philadelphia Press says:

"Honolulu, Jan. 24—The United States battleship Colorado was severely damaged today when the liner Cleveland, entering the harbor, crashed into the warship. The accident was caused by the sudden death of the pilot, Milton P. Saunders, who was bringing the passenger vessel into the harbor. He was standing on the bridge and had given several signals to the engine room which were followed. Just before the crash came the captain of the Cleveland, standing at the opposite end of the bridge saw Saunders fall. He had died of heart disease.

"The damage to the battleship is reported to be heavy. Several of the big guns were smashed and the propeller torn off. The Cleveland sustained no serious damage, but there was a panic on board. A large party of millionaires on a pleasure trip with their families were terrified when the crash was felt, and it required the efforts of the entire deck crew of the Cleveland to calm the passengers."

Earlier in the week a dispatch told of a woman passenger jumping overboard between Bombay and Yokohama. Another passenger leaped after her and kept her head above water until rescued. The woman died, however, soon after being taken on board.

MINERS FIX WAGE SCALE

Demand More Pay For All Bituminous Workers.

MANY GRIEVANCES TAKEN UP

Ask For an Increase of Ten Cents a Ton and 20 Per Cent More For All Day Labor.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 25.—The scale committee of the United Mine Workers of America's national committee submitted a report, and there is a demand for increased wages for every class of work in and about the bituminous mines.

The report sets out that there has been a steady increase in the cost of living since the last wage scale was fixed, that conditions about the mines have become more onerous and that the introduction of labor saving machinery, the use of gas and oil for fuel, are making unnecessary the long hours of labor at which the miners are now employed. The report takes up many grievances that are purely local and makes a number of demands for their correction. The wage demands follow:

That all coal be weighed before being screened, and paid for on the mine run basis, and that the re-adjustment of the prices be made on the basis of the actual percentage of screenings as compared with lump coal.

That we demand a flat 10 cents a ton increase at the basing points.

Twenty per cent increase on all dead work, yardage and day labor.

Uniform workday and wage scale for all classes of outside and inside day labor.

A proper readjustment of the machine differential at the basing points in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and western Pennsylvania.

That a uniform day of seven hours at the working place for all classes of inside labor be made the basis of the above scale, based on present prices.

That seven hours constitute a day's work on Saturday.

We demand weekly payments. The coal companies shall not be permitted to have more than two wages held in their offices at any one time.

We demand that there shall be no limit to the amount of deductions made through the companies' offices for the miners' organization.

We demand that there shall be no discrimination by the coal companies in the employment of mine workers on account of creed, color or nationality.

We demand that all local inequalities and internal differences be referred to the districts affected.

We demand that this contract shall be entered into for a period of two years, becoming effective April 1, 1912.

The committee recommends that the demands of the anthracite mine workers, as made by them in the territory district convention of districts Nos. 1, 7 and 9, held at Pottsville, Pa., Nov. 31, 1911, be made a part of the demands of this convention and that the international officers be authorized and instructed to co-operate with those districts in establishing the same.

New York, Jan. 25.—District Attorney Whitman is preparing for an investigation of the recent rise in butter and eggs in the city to find out whether a "gentlemen's agreement" exists among dealers to fix and control the prices of these necessities.

Mr. Whitman has investigated the workings of the produce system, and several witnesses, it is said, will be summoned before the grand jury next week to tell what they know about the raising of prices.

Later it is declared, the district attorney will demand a public hearing on the situation before an especially assigned magistrate.

SEARCHLIGHT TURNED ON

TAFT NOW CONVINCED ROOSEVELT WILL RUN

Sure Colonel is Receptive Candidate For President.

Washington, Jan. 25.—If the Taft administration ever had any question that Theodore Roosevelt was receptive to a candidate for president, that doubt has been dispelled by developments in connection with the Missouri situation.

It developed that in the possession of administration circles all letters written by Col. Roosevelt in response to those from Missouri Republicans which have convinced the administration that the former president stands ready to take the nomination.

These facts have come to light on the heels of the news that Governor Hadley of Missouri has declared for Roosevelt.

The Hadley declaration is of great significance. Until a short time ago Governor Hadley and the Taft leaders in Missouri were in close relations. In fact, there was a plan on foot to put Hadley on the ticket in second place with President Taft.

But within ten days Governor Hadley has turned to Roosevelt. The meaning of this is that Hadley has picked, not Taft, but Roosevelt as a winner. It is declared in administration circles that Hadley hopes to be nominated for vice-president on a Roosevelt ticket.

Hadley is classed as a progressive, and is a man of influence not only in his state, but in the middle west. His announcement means a big fight in Missouri.

Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel, who is from Missouri, will be a leading figure in the fight as the representative of the administration.

FROZEN OUT BY STEEL TRUST

Contractor Tells How He Lost Gunboat Contract.

SAYS HE FORFEITED $1000

Declares Subsidiary Company Against Which He Bid Refused to Sell Him Boiler Tubes.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Refusal of subsidiary companies of the United States Steel corporation to sell him boiler material is alleged to have forced Richard H. Gray, a San Francisco iron and steel dealer, to default on a government contract, according to his testimony before the house "steel trust" investigating committee.

Gray testified that after obtaining a contract in 1906 to supply seamless tubes for the gunboat Bennington, subsidiary companies of the United States Steel corporation refused to sell to him. He declared the refusal was based on the ground that the Shelby Steel company, a concern subsidiary to the steel corporation, had been a bidder.

He wrote to many dealers, he said, but all declined to sell and referred him to the Shelby company. He said he was compelled to surrender the Bennington contract and to pay more than $1100 forfeit when he could not obtain the materials, the contract afterwards going to the Shelby company.

Mr. Gray was cross-examined by Representative Gardner of Massachusetts. This resulted in the production of a letter to him from Secretary of the Navy Metcalf, showing that the department had declined to refund him the forfeit money because of the discovery that he was a middleman and had forfeited on his contract because of carelessness in bidding without being assured he could procure the necessary materials to carry out the contract.

The witness charged the Shelby company and other concerns with conspiracy against his business in 1906, and told how his business correspondence with big dealers, asking for prices on seamless tubes, found its way to the Shelby company.

The committee next week will resume inquiry into the operation by the United States Steel corporation of its subsidiary railroads in the Lake Erie, Lake Superior and Birmingham districts. Freight rates on ore and manufactured products, alleged to operate to the disadvantage of competitors of the corporation, are to be inquired into exhaustively.

The revised iron and steel tariff schedule, approved by the Democratic caucus, was introduced by Representative Underwood and referred to the ways and means committee. The committee will act on the bill and a strict party vote is expected, the Republicans voting against it solidly.

Chairman Underwood will report the bill with the committee recommendation that it pass, and the debate will probably begin Friday.

Some Republican leaders are discussing the advisability of submitting a substitute bill, but it is probable that the minority opposition will be confined to separate amendments to the various schedules.

TAFT MAY VETO STEEL BILL

Republicans Will Oppose Revision Till After Tariff Board Reports.

Washington, Jan. 25.—After a conference between President Taft and Representatives Payne and Dalzell, minority members of the house ways and means committee, Mr. Payne declared that the minority would oppose the tariff bill endorsed by the Democratic house caucus reducing iron and steel duties.

According to Mr. Payne, the minority would not agree to reductions on the iron and steel schedule unless based on information from the tariff board. President Taft was understood to share the view of the Republican leaders.

This attitude taken by the house leaders after the conference with the president is taken as indicating that Mr. Taft will veto the bill if the Democrats succeed in forcing a steel bill through the senate.

The same attitude of insisting on a report from the tariff board before any tariff revision was undertaken was assumed by the Republicans in the recent special session of congress, and it resulted in the prompt veto of the cotton, wool and farmers' free list bills.

DUKE SEES TAFT TODAY

Royal Visitor Will Be Received With Ambassadorial Honors.

Washington, Jan. 25.—After conferences lasting many hours, the White House and state department officials were sufficiently "brushed up or prepared" to announce some of the details for the reception of the Duke of Connaught by President Taft this afternoon.

Major A. W. Butt, as the president's personal aide, will meet the duke at the Union station and will act as his official guide. No soldiery will accompany the duke from the station to the embassy, but from the embassy to the White House a troop of cavalry will form an escort of honor.

President Taft will receive the duke probably in the blue room, and Major Butt will be the only person present. Later the British ambassador and the duke's aide, Colonel Othier, will be presented.

Following the formal reception, Mrs. Taft will serve tea, probably in the state diningroom. Wives of the cabinet members and possibly a few friends of Mrs. Taft may be invited this part of the reception.

From the White House Major Butt and the cavalry will take the royal visitor back to the British embassy, where he will be a dinner guest of the ambassador.

CRASH FOLLOWS DEATH OF PILOT AT WHEEL

Cruiser Colorado Damaged by Collision With Liner.

Honolulu, Jan. 25.—In a collision between the Hamburg-American liner Cleveland and the United States armored cruiser Colorado the latter suffered considerable damage.

The collision was due to the fact that the pilot, Milton P. Sanders, who was in charge of the Cleveland, had fallen dead on the liner's bridge.

The steamer struck the Colorado astern, jamming a gun near the cabin occupied by Captain William A. Gill. The gun turret was wrecked, and the resetting of the gun probably will be necessary. It is believed the propeller of the Colorado also was damaged. The Cleveland arrived from New York, via China and Japan.

The vessel was on a trip around the world on a tourists' excursion and carried hundreds of American travelers. Many were ashore at the time of the collision.

JACK CARDIFF CONVERTED

Pugilist Will Follow Billy Sunday's Steps as an Evangelist.

Reading, Pa., Jan. 25.—Word from Canton, O., brings news of the "conversion," getting religion, of Jack Cardiff, a pugilist of Reading, who claims the welter-weight championship of Berks county, at the revivals being held in that city by Billy Sunday.

After twenty years in the ring, Cardiff now proposes to become an evangelist of the "live wire" type, and his friends and admirers feel confident that he "will get away with it."

Cardiff is thirty-five years old, a glib talker, and his return to Reading is awaited with interest. Cardiff, whose real name is Charles Morris, is well known, and his services are expected to be in brisk demand as a "revival shout."

Dinners to Brazilian Ambassador.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Three notable dinners are to be given soon to Domício Da Gama, the Brazilian ambassador. Huntington Wilson, assistant secretary of state, will give the first of these at his home on Jan. 31. The second will be given by Frederick Townsend Martin, of New York, on Feb. 8, and the third by Judge Gary, of the United States Steel corporation, at a date yet to be fixed.

Postpone "Bathtub" Trust Trial.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 25.—The trial of the government's criminal case against the so-called "bathtub" trust, which was to begin Jan. 30, has been postponed until Feb. 6, at the request of the defense.

SMITHERS GOT A BUMP.

The Minister's Comment When He Heard How It Happened.

Within one minute of stepping out of the taxicab in front of his home Mr. Smithers received two separate and distinct shocks. The first was the size of the bill, and the second was the result of his argument with the chauffeur. Mr. Smithers used such language to the chauffeur before he paid the bill that the taxi man could not resist the temptation to swat Mr. Smithers just once before departing.

On either side of Mr. Smithers lived a gentleman of the cloth, and once during the fracas with the chauffeur Mr. Smithers thought he heard some one spring a shade in the house next door, but before he had time to turn and see who it was the chauffeur landed with that swat. When Mr. Smithers regained his feet the only thing present which had not been there before was a lump rapidly rising in the center of his classic brow.

Next evening at a banquet he met his good neighbor on the east, the Rev. Mr. Havens, who greeted him cordially, but eyed his lump.

"Why, my dear friend," began the clergyman soliloquy, "how did you meet with your painful injury?"

"Oh—eh—er—I had to go down into the cellar last night to see about something that went wrong with the furnace. Beastly things, furnaces, you understand. Always getting out of kilter and making you go down into dark cellars—er—and poking round in the blackness." Then Mr. Smithers proceeded into many minute details of how he had hit his head against a projection, how it had felled him to the earth, how he had risen painfully and dragged himself upstairs, but how, in spite of all he could do, the lump had come out and asserted itself.

The minister listened. "Queer, isn't it," he remarked reluctantly, "how people get hurt? There was a woman I knew who came to church one Sunday morning with a wound upon her forehead, and when I inquired of her how her injury was received she hastened to assure me that it was nothing at all serious. 'I—I bit it,' said she."—New York Press.

THE BACON HOG IN GROWING DEMAND

There has been much dispute over the relative merits of the bacon hog and the lard hog. Judging from comparative numbers, we may conclude that the lard type is the more popular with the farmers and feeders of the corn growing states. There is, however, a constantly increasing demand for leaner pork, writes H. T. Morgan in Country Gentleman. Twenty years ago the bacon of the ordinary market was a side from two and a half to three and a half inches thick, with scarcely a trace of lean, while now the market demands a side showing one-third to one-half lean, and the whole must be firm and of fine quality. The matter of quality has been receiving considerable attention from breeders during the past few years. Since the price of feeds has steadily advanced the feeder has found it profitable to use a greater variety, and a much better quality of pork has resulted. Years ago, when corn was worth less than half its present price, it constituted practically the sole grain ration for the hog. The result of such feeding was a carcass containing a high percentage of fat and very little lean or edible meat, which did not suit a bacon trade.

The popularity of the Large Yorkshire is due to his superior bacon qualities. He is one of the oldest breeds of swine of which we have any record, mention having been made of him as early as 1789. At that period he was a large, white, coarse, leggy and narrow backed hog with heavy overhanging ears. The breed was much improved early in the nineteenth century by crossing with the Small Yorkshire, supposed to have been developed from the small Chinese hog. It is probable that the Berkshire had something to do with the improvement in the Large Yorkshire at this early period. The Yorkshire hog shown is the type to head a bacon herd.

The English market demands a superior quality of bacon, which sells at a price considerably higher than that in the United States. England originated the two breeds that are purely bacon hogs. They were developed under conditions that necessitated the feeding of a ration consisting of grains high in protein. To this fact is due the superior quality of the bacon. Professor C. S. Plumb writes: "The general characteristics of the bacon pig as compared with the so called lard hog are as follows: Back not broad, head somewhat long, side long and deep, a smooth shoulder, lighter ham and somewhat longer leg. The general flesh covering is much less fat than the lard type." The habit of putting on lean rather than fat has become well fixed in the bacon breeds, and when crossed with other breeds they transmit this quality in a remarkable degree. The bacon from crosses with bacon type hogs is very often as good as that from the pure bred bacon hogs.

Of the two leading breeds of bacon hogs the large Yorkshire is easily the more popular, although the Tamworth finds favor in certain localities, both in England and Canada. The latter produces a large amount of export bacon, and the market for live hogs of the bacon type is usually at least a dollar a hundred pounds higher there than in the United States. Denmark, Ireland and Canada are at present producing the greater part of the export bacon used in England and Scotland, but in spite of this inviting market the Mississippi valley as yet prefers to produce the earlier maturing, easier fattened and thicker fleshed hog of the lard type. The production of a greater number of bacon hogs, however, is bound to follow the increasing demand both at home and abroad for a better grade of bacon and hams. A general campaign of education on the merits of bacon has been started by some of the packers.

Various Swine Breeds. The white breeds of swine are the Yorkshire, O. I. C., Chester White, Cheshire, Victoria and Suffolk. The black breeds are Poland China, Berkshire, Essex and Mulefoot. The red or sandy breeds are the Duroc-Jersey and Tamworth. The very large breeds are the Yorkshire, Chester White, O. I. C. and Tamworth. The very small breeds are the Suffolk, Essex and Small Yorkshire. The other breeds, including the Berkshire, Poland China, Victoria, Duroc-Jersey and Cheshire, stand between these extremes in the matter of size, but mature much quicker than the large breeds.

Shelter the Stock. Shelter should be provided for all of the animals so that they will be comfortable during winter weather. Leaving out of consideration the welfare of the animals, it is not economical to feed animals when exposed to cold and damp weather. Feeding can not compensate for inadequate shelter.

Roots Good For Horses. Roots fed to horses to the extent of not more than ten pounds a day will take the place of a portion of the grain ration and will at the same time go a long way toward the prevention of indigestion.

The Young Member. Grantley Berkeley in his "Recollections" notes one of the shortest parliamentary speeches on record. It was in the house of commons. Leonard Charlton tried to make a maiden speech, and, rising in his place with a very bald head, known, too, as he was to everybody as one of the oldest staggers in all the ways of the world, he began with great affectation of inexperience and with an exceedingly mild voice, "Mr. Speaker, I am but a young member." On hearing this assertion from so crafty a man, possessing so venerable a pate, the entire house roared with laughter. Twice he stopped, and three times he commenced with these words, but it was useless. The house would not listen, and he never essayed to speak again.

BEAUTY OF TRIPOLI

Snapshot Taken of Belle in Fete Dress.

Tripoli.—In the picture is portrayed a charming native Tripolitan girl wearing a special fete dress. She is one of the dusky beauties of the country now being fought for by Italy and Turkey, and the natural pose and grace of the subject lured the snapshotter to the creation of a work of art.

In Tripoli, peopled by almost every race under the sun, the women and children are possessed of a high degree of beauty, and the place has been called a city of romance. Pirates and corsairs, doomed by gunboats and modern progress to refrain from their nefarious exploits, thronged the cafes until the recent inroad of Italian troops. In blue zouaves and loose, baggy trousers, faced with brilliant touches of gold and red embroidery, they remain at heart unaltered. The streets of the city are described as a riotous fantasy of architecture, with high whitewashed buildings, quaint projections and perforated windows, whence the harem ladies, themselves unseen, viewed the passing throng. The shops and bazaars were numerous, and sometimes had overhead a latticed roof, densely overgrown with vines. In the moving mass in the streets were Jews, Armenians, Sudanese, Arabs, Turks and Bedouins. Donkeys nosed their way through the clattering crowd, and beggars in picturesque attire appealed silently for alms.

But the most remarkable scene was to be witnessed every Tuesday in what was known as the Halfa market. There caravans used to arrive from the south and east, and camels bearing various products were formed into miniature camps. The bargaining and the bartering during the early hours of the morning were wonderful to see, for from 5,000 to 10,000 persons usually attended the sales. Vendors could be seen squatted behind strips of matting, on which were little piles of oranges, lemons, figs, vegetables, grain, nuts, fish, dried locusts and other edibles, while cooks fried fritters in oil over basins of glowing charcoal. But all this is now changed. Bullet, saber and shell have scattered the peaceful inhabitants, and war's horrors reign where but a few weeks ago an Oriental and luxurious people pursued the even tenor of a way to which they had been accustomed for centuries.

In the very center of Tripoli one was reminded that Rome, the universal, had been there. Here stands a solid and ornate triumphal arch, built of marble, once white, now darkened and defaced by time, and recently scarred by the gaping marks of war missiles. An inscription, still legible, records that the arch was erected by a quæstor under the joint reign of Lucius Aelius Verus and Marcus Auerlius. It stands low, for it is half buried in the accumulated soil, and one of its portals is debased to the purposes of a native cooper's shop. But its carvings still preserve something of their ancient beauty, and the structure, standing there in the heart of an alien city and civilization during all these centuries, speaks of the power and prestige of the days of the Caesars.

THOUGHT TIN WAS SILVER

Chinese Pirates Meet Bitter Disappointment After Risking Their Necks for Loot.

It was a surprise to the Chinese pirates who looted the Pacific Mail liner Asia, wrecked in Oriental waters sometime ago, when what they believed to be slabs of silver turned out to be nothing but tin. They were more than disappointed in view of the fact that they had risked their necks to get the supposed precious metal and had conveyed it a great distance in sampans to dispose of it.

According to W. W. Pipkin, connected with the Chinese maritime customs service, who arrived the other day of the liner Persia, there were at least 100 small Chinese fishing boats that put in at various places laden with tin. In their haste to get away with the cheap but shining metal the pirates had overlooked the more valuable silks and other rich far eastern products which were in the Asia's cargo.

There is nothing now visible of the old Pacific mailer, according to passengers on the Persia, which passed close to where her sister ship went to her doom on the treacherous crags that seem to beckon mockingly out of the mist that incessantly hangs over them. What portions of the steamer were not broken up by salvagers were dismembered by the beating seas.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A SINGULAR VEHICLE

By ELINOR STEWART CATON
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

A seedy man, out at the elbows and looking as though he had slept the night in the park, stopped a gentleman on the sidewalk and said:

"My friend, you haven't seen a family consistin' of a woman and four small children—two boys and two girls, the girls lookin' like me and the boys like their mother—go ridin' by here to-day in a two story frame house painted yaller?"

"Excuse me, my friend. I'm in a hurry."

The wayfarer passed on, leaving the seedy man standing looking after him as though he felt very much hurt. Leaning up against a tree box, he waited for another person to question. A lady came along, and the man, pulling the rim of his hat, accosted her.

"Beg your pardon, ma'am. Have you seen anything of a poor woman with four children enjoyin' themselves on an afternoon ride in a yaller house on wheels down this here street?"

The lady looked sorrowfully at the man, took out her portemonnaie, picked out a silver coin to the value of 10 cents, gave it to him and walked on. He looked at the retreating lady, then down at the coin in his hand, and didn't seem to understand.

The next person to whom he applied was a benevolent looking gentleman with nauton chop whiskers and spectacles.

"I'm lookin'," said the seedy man, "for a family"—and stopped short.

"Well, my good man, tell me about what family you're looking for."

"I've tole that to two pussons already, and they don't seem to know what I'm talkin' about. I thort I'd just call 'em a family to you, so's I wouldn't mix you up, and say nothin' about the rest of it."

"But how can I help you to become reunited to this family without your telling me more about them?"

"Well, if you're sure you'll understand, I'm lookin' for 'em to ride by here about this time in a yaller house enjoyin' themselves."

"In a yeller house?"

"Yes, two story, shingle roof."

"My good man," said the other after contemplating him thoughtfully for some time, "tell me where you live. I'm going to take you home."

"My residence is anywhere from 74 Union street to no number at all at present, Hopkins street."

"Poor fellow!" sighed the benevolent man.

"I tole you you wouldn't understand me. None o' the others did. What's the use o' my tellin' people all about it? They only think I'm gone daft." He looked very much troubled. Taking out his handkerchief, he blew his nose sonorously.

"Come with me," said the benevolent man coaxingly.

"I don't want to go anywhere with nobody. I just want to catch my wife and children as they go by and enjoy the rest o' the ride with 'em."

"I think I can take you where you'll learn all about it. Come."

"Where you goin' to take me?"

"Oh, I'll take you where you'll be cared for."

"I don't want to be cared for. I want to know whether my family has gone past. There's a puff of smoke blowin' around the corner now. I shouldn't wonder if it's them."

"I see. They're coming in an automobile. You confused it with a yeller house."

"I didn't do no such thing. The smoke I'm talkin' about comes out o' the chimney."

The gentleman assumed an authoritative tone. "Now, my man, either walk with me to a police station or I'll call a policeman and have you taken there by force. You're off your head. I don't know whether you are a dangerous lunatic or not, but you need to be shut up, if not for the public good, for your own."

"I knowed it," said the man lugubriously. "I knowed if I tole you the hull thing I'd get myself into trouble."

"Will you come?"

"Who are you anyways?"

"I'm the president of the Society of General Charities. Now you know that I intend you no harm. I wish to help you."

"But I don't need no help. There! There's another puff o' smoke. I reckon they'll be turnin' the corner pretty soon. Will you wait a few minutes? If they don't come along just as I said they would I'll go with you."

"Instead of waitin' I'll go with you. If you are satisfied the smoke you see comes from another cause than what you suppose, perhaps you will go with me."

"Reckon I'll risk it."

"They walked down the street to the one where they saw the smoke and, turning into it, saw a windmill pulled around by a horse. Ropes led from it to a two story yellow house about 100 feet away, which was being moved in the middle of the street."

"There she are!" exclaimed the seedy man. "Come on. I'll show you the family."

The gentleman hesitated. Then, with an expression of disconcertment, he was about to go on his way when he changed his mind and followed the other. Sitting in a window darning stockings was a woman, while children were running about.

"Hello, Moll!" said the seedy man.

"Hello, John!" said the woman.

The benevolent gentleman took a bill out of his pocket, handed it to the mover and walked away.

The calla lily is a favorite plant with many and reaches its highest perfection during the winter months when it has had a couple of months' rest during the summer and is put in a well drained pot and fertilized generously. While prepared fertilizers give good results, pulverized cow or sheep manure is excellent. A liquid made by soaking some of the fertilizer in water for a few hours should be applied at least once a week. The calla being a warm country plant should be given plenty of sunlight and should not be allowed to get a chill.

I can recommend them just as highly today as I did two years ago when I gave a public statement in their favor. For a long time I was in poor health and finally kidney trouble made its appearance. The pains in my back were so severe that I could hardly move and often I became very dizzy. I had chills and headaches and knew that something must be done. On the advice of a friend, I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at the Peoples' Drug Store and to my gratification, their use restored me to good health. Even in severe, chronic cases of catarrh, Ely's Cream Balm never fails to quickly and effectually check the poisonous discharge which clogs the head and throat, causing the disgusting hawking, spitting, and blowing of the nose. This remedy not only drives out the disease, but heals and strengthens the weakened membranes, thus ending catarrh. Catarrh is a filthy, disgusting disease. Don't put up with it another day. Get a 50 cent bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist and see how quickly you will be relieved. It is perfectly harmless. People's Drug Store special agent for Gettysburg, Pa.
